Sintratec: New distribution partner in South Korea

Sintratec wins L.corporation as distributor for South Korea. The leading Swiss 3D printer manufacturer wants to really get started in the eighth largest 3D printing market.

Brugg, 2 August 2018 – Sintratec's compact SLS 3D printers are now being sold by the Korean company L.corporation. Among others, the 3D printing specialist from Seongnam, Korea has successfully been distributing FDM and SLA machines from reputable manufacturers for several years. With the Sintratec Kit and the Sintratec S1, L.corporation is now introducing SLS machines into its product portfolio for the first time and intends to develop the SLS market in South Korea newly.

"The SLS market in South Korea is still underdeveloped compared to the FDM and SLA markets. In the industrial sector, the SLS market is dominated by EOS. However, the demand for 3D printers in the Korean industry is still below its potential as the necessary skills are lacking. Sintratec's entry-level models are exactly what they need", says Junwhan Lim, CEO of L.corporation.

"Our compact SLS systems are perfect for the cost-effective entry into SLS technology. The machines are easy to handle, run on regular power and do not require inert gas. With the Sintratec Kit, the self-assembly also familiarizes the user with the complete machine and the SLS technology. And the best part is that the quality of the sintered components is comparable to large, expensive SLS machines", explains Christian von Burg, CTO at Sintratec.
